

Rayven Kilmer serves as the Family and Youth Committee Chair for AACCES, where she champions collaboration between families, youth, and community organizations. With nearly a decade of experience in education, she has worked across middle schools, high schools, and community colleges, guiding students and families toward academic achievement and personal growth.

Rayven holds a bachelor's degree in education from Central Washington University and a master's degree in English from Arizona State University. In her current role as a community college advisor, she empowers students to navigate higher education and build pathways to success.

Her passion lies in advancing educational equity and cultivating inclusive environments where all students feel seen, supported, and inspired. Through her leadership, Rayven strives to strengthen community partnerships and create opportunities that uplift youth voices. Outside of her professional work, she enjoys engaging in local initiatives that celebrate diversity, creativity, and connection across the Tri-Cities.
